

VibePick's Terms of Service

Please read this before using VibePick. By creating an account or using the app in any way, you're agreeing to the points below. If you don't agree, please don't use the platform.

VibePick is a mood-aware movie recommendation app built as part of a bachelor's thesis. It suggests films based on your current mood, your genre preferences, your viewing history, and the streaming services you use. It is not a mental health tool and isn't meant to give psychological or medical advice. If you're struggling, please talk to an actual healthcare professional.

Recommendations are given for entertainment and research purposes only. There's no guarantee a suggested film will suit your taste, be appropriate for your age, or actually be available on the streaming service you picked.

To use VibePick you need to sign up with your name, a working email address, and a password, and you agree to keep that information accurate. You're responsible for keeping your login details to yourself and for anything that happens under your account, so please use a password you don't reuse elsewhere. You can delete your account at any time from Your Account > Delete Account. This is immediate, permanent, and removes your data as described in the Privacy Policy.

How your data is collected, used, and deleted is explained fully in the separate Privacy Policy, which is part of this agreement. Using VibePick means you've read it and agree to your data being processed under the GDPR and Romanian data protection law.

The only third-party service VibePick relies on is the TMDB API, used purely to pull film metadata. No personal data about you is ever sent there. TMDB's own terms apply to that content, and VibePick isn't responsible for how TMDB or any other outside service operates.